Still another of the famously pretty Ah Fong sisters, of Honolulu, will be led to Honolulu newspapers say that the approaching wedding in the great Ah Fong mansion in the suburbs of Honolulu will be the most notable event in point of ceremony and style of any similar affairs that have taken place there. Miss Sue Ah Fong will be wedded to Samuel S. Hocroft, who had been considered one of the foremost matrimonial catches in Oregon for several years. He is a Harvard University man, an heir to large mining wealth and a traveler and polished club man. After ten years of mingling in society in Europe and much of America he has laid his heart at the feet of a lovely daughter of the tropical islands in the south seas and he snaps his fingers at all talk about the Chinese father of his prospective bride.

No home in all the broad Pacific has been so well known by American and British naval officers and globe-trotting tourists for longer than a dozen years as the Ah Fong mansion in Honolulu. Naval officers say that very few homes have been so hospitably open to them in their cruises as has been that of Ah Fong, the millionaire Chinaval officer who has been aboard a ship ories through his brain. MUST WORK TO WIN. That Is What James Whitcomb Riley

Says Writers Must Do.

James Whitcomb Riley, the poet, was minutely and painstakingly writing his in three of his books, for admiring purchasers, when he was asked for his opinion on the subject of the expansion of Indiana

Belonging to a later generation of "Hoosers" than his friend, General Wallace, he holds a slightly altered opinion, and has been spared the bitterness of revilement, tive State. Wherever English is read, Riley's poems have won their way, shoulder to shoulder, with "Ben-Hur." Mr. Riley "I do not know what I should say about

Indiana literature and the causes of its growth. I think, possibly, the reason it has attracted such wide attention, and expanded in so many directions, is that it drew inspiration and received impetus from having been lampooned and made fun of by every cultured 'Tom, Dick and Harry' of the outside world.

"Personally, the world has always been kind to me, but I do not know that I expected kindness. "It is glorious to be barred-to suffer the whips and scorn of self-accredited superfors! It roused us, this superciliousness, to our real worth, and it inspired us to put forth our best efforts. That excellence in literature is found in Indiana I am thankful for, and I am glad that I have outlived the ridicule, and that others have recognized, of late, this special excellence of the work of our authors, and given credit most generously "I am sure that the same excellence will be found in our neighboring Western States, and that we, in turn, will not withhold from them encouragement and recognition. Illinois has already developed come rare poets. Ohio, too, ranks high in Western literature.

"The beginner, with his youthful imagiation just 'ramping it,' is too sensitive to the pricks of criticism. He stands in awe of the self-constituted critic, until he cannot see anything else, and, necessarily, loses sight of the value of ideas, which count more than all else. He can never make up the loss in years. Indeed, he can never regain it. It is expecting to be a writer in six months or a year that makes him think himself a failure. "A literary life means work. He who would write must learn that, and learn to work hard. Look at Bernhardt's art; look at the amount of hard work she goes through every day, to make it perfect. How many writers do as she does? No good hing was every done quickly-nothing of any value. The capacity for hard work has had much to do with the development of Indiana literature."

From his own statement, it may be inerred that Mr. Riley attributes much of the excellence of Indiana literature to persistence in the face of early and unsparing ridicule and denial of a hearing. His own experience is proof of the soundness of his theory, for, as he has related, it took twenty years of pertinacious endeavor beere he succeeded in having his work eccepted by one of the old, high-class magazines. But at length a day came when he
